Lisa Sennhauser-Kelly / Coaching of Professionals and Executives

Lisa Sennhauser-Kelly, an experienced senior female leader, is an accredited Professional Certified Coach (PCC) by the International Coach Federation, a Marshall Goldsmith Certified Stakeholder Centred Coach, Marshall Goldsmith Global Leader of the Future 360 Assessment Certified, and a Leading Brains certified SCOAP NeuroLeadership Coach.

Lisa has previously enjoyed a career as a finance professional in Australia, Europe, and North America. She has a proven ability to influence and impact, across complex global organizations. As a result Lisa was promoted to both Executive Director as well as Managing Director in UBS, and later became CFO of Equatex Global financial services. While Lisa's leadership experiences lend credibility to her coaching, her main strength lies in her ability to identify motivational drivers and thus transform individuals - and their organizations - facilitating growth.

An Aussie, Lisa lives with her Swiss husband and two children in Zurich. Lisa is passionate about coaching leaders to thrive at work and in life. The coaching is in English or (Swiss) German, in person or online.

Lisa's strength lies in her ability to identify motivational drivers and thus transform individuals and their organizations.

The LIVE Coaching Model™ is designed to facilitate sustainable change, a transition in the mindset and behaviors of the coachee, through the phases of Learning, Imagining, Validating and Evolving. This builds a basis for achieving significant ongoing professional and personal success. A holistic approach is taken, looking at all aspects of the individual's life, to ensure that progress is made to the individual as a whole, thus multiple goals are achieved. Lisa has worked with clients to effectively apply the model to professionals in stable roles as well as those in transition including restructuring, redundancy, changing careers or relationships, having to deal with a new situation, or combining career and family.

In each phase the coach is always encouraging and supporting the creation of self-awareness in the client, as a basis for the client to transform and evolve in each relationship, for example, as a leader, or as a leader reporting to senior management, as a peer. This is done by active listening, by holding a mirror to the client and reflecting back the client's answers, by using powerful and encouraging questions, and where necessary, the use of reframing.

The coach is always holding on to the client's vision of the future, encouraging and supporting, holding a mirror to the clients aspirations, reflecting what is heard back to provide greater self-awareness and build confidence.

This model is built on the belief that self-directed change can only occur through self-awareness.
